Design changes

Feedback on our initial design document indicated that we are giving ourselves too much work to complete in the time given for this project. However, we believe that the work we have laid out for each milestone is achievable. The design document lists all the requirements but it does include a statement on whether or not it will be completed. If there were any confusion while reviewing our design document, we think it could've come from this.

We would like to clarify soon whether or not we should still move forward in completing all of our original planning. In the future, someone will reach out via email or office hours just to make sure we aren't setting ourselves up to underdeliver on our promises.
